Introduction

The International Conference on Quality Education 2023 is organized by the International Association for Quality Education (IAfQE), which is an international non-profit education association working to upgrade the quality of education to achieve Sustainable Development Goal No. 4: Quality Education in 2030.

The conference will be focused on new trends in education, the latest pedagogical approaches, assessments and evaluation methods, as well as new approaches in school management and capacity building for teachers and professionals in education.

Individuals have to face the volatility, uncertainty, complexity, and Ambiguity (VUCA) situation of the present global society. It will be emphasized the ways to develop skills essential to the 21st century as well as the mindfulness of the individual to be a skillful and spiritually well-being person to overcome the competitiveness of the global society. The conference will be a platform to discuss new strategies, research findings, and best practices to identify new frameworks for that.

"Greening Education" aims to deliver strong, coordinated, and comprehensive action that will prepare every learner to acquire the knowledge, skills, values, and attitudes to tackle climate change and promote sustainable development. The implementation of the greening education concept in the school system will also be discussed at the conference.

Keynote speakers will share their best practices, research findings, and new knowledge on different kinds of themes related to quality education.

In addition to that, the performance of the schools will be evaluated under the identified key performance criteria. Selected schools will be recognized for their excellence. School visits, honoring ceremonies, and cultural programs have also been scheduled to make the conference colorful.

The conference is an international benchmark for global leaders in education to make international networks and work collaboratively to empower their schools and institutes with standards of quality education.

The conference will be held physically from September 29th to October 4th, 2023, in Colombo, Sri Lanka, with the participation of educators in the South Asian Region as well as other Countries.

Awards will be granted by the Prime minister of Sri Lanka or the Minister of Education of Sri Lanka.

The Conference is limited to 100 educators, and selections will be made based on early registrations, qualifications, and experience.

Problem Statement

Existing curriculums, Teaching-learning processes, and assessment and evaluation methodologies in schools still don't give more priority to developing knowledge, skills, attitudes, and mindsets (K-SAM) in children to overcome a competitive global society.

Curriculums, teaching-learning processes, and assessment and evaluation methodologies in schools are not being rapidly developed to be compatible with fast-moving global needs such as education for employability.

A huge gap exists between the expected outcome of the children in the school system by the universities and vocational education institutes and the real product of the school system.

Traditional teacher training mechanisms are out-of-date, and those mechanisms have no capacity to develop quality teachers to upgrade the skillfulness and mindfulness of children.

Opportunities are limited for individuals and schools to find solutions and new strategies to the above issues and to share research findings and best practices.
